Be Safe And Responsible At All Times!

Shoot only where it is both safe and legal.
Treat every gun as if it were loaded.
Always keep the muzzle pointed in a safe direction.
Unload firearms when not in use.
Store guns and ammunition beyond reach of children.

The mission of the Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) is to provide sound stewardship of Washington's fish and wildlife resources. A significant amount of annual funding to support our stewardship activities is derived from a unique federal excise tax placed on ammunition, archery products, and firearms. WDFW's shooting range development program recognizes the important financial contributions hunters and recreational shooters make via these taxes and now devotes a portion of the money received to promote safe, accessible shooting opportunities statewide.

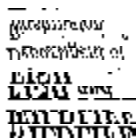

Every non-military, non-law enforcement shooting facility we could identify here in Washington has been included in this booklet. Some ranges listed herein are for members only, while many more are open to the general public during certain hours of the day or specific days each month. Commercial ranges are also listed.

Please note that almost all ranges charge an hourly or day-use rate to access the facility, regardless whether the range is commercial, public or private. Naturally, charges vary according to the type of facility and services offered. Almost all shooting ranges welcome new members and encourage prospective members to visit their facility to become familiar with their activities and services. Check what's available in your area, visit the ranges which offer the services you are most interested in, and then decide for yourself which ranges you prefer to patronize. Regardless of your choice, remember that "Safety First" is the operative rule whenever and wherever you shoot.

Every effort has been made to insure complete and accurate information. If you identify errors or omissions, please notify hunter education division staff at:

Limited Shooting Range Funds Available

The goal of the Department of Fish and Wildlife's shooting range development program is to promote public safety in Washington State. Federal funding for shooting ranges is derived from a federal excise tax on archery equipment and on handguns, pistols and revolvers. Washington receives its portion of these federal excise tax monies on the basis of state population.

Range operators interested in using federal funding should understand the requirements and limitations imposed upon project applicants. Generally speaking, federal funds can be used to:

Construct New Facilities. At a minimum, new range construction projects require preparation of an Environmental Assessment. In addition, a Finding Of No Significant Impact must be issued by the regional director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service before any new range construction project is approved.

Maintain And Improve Existing Facilities. Range maintenance applications normally qualify for a "categorical exclusion" from additional federal environmental requirements because they do not have as significant an impact as new construction or range expansion projects. Proposed "maintenance" projects are the easiest to fund.

Expand Existing Facilities. Expansion projects do not qualify for a categorical exclusion and require an Environmental Assessment. As with new construction, a Finding Of No Significant Impact must be issued by the regional director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service before any new range construction project is approved.

Federal regulations prohibit funding for commercial or privately-owned shooting ranges operated for-profit, ranges reserved exclusively for law enforcement or competition shooting, and ranges which are not open to the public on a regular basis. Ranges which allow public access only for competitive events are not eligible to apply for federal funding.

Limited state funds are also available from the Interagency Committee for Outdoor Recreation (IAC). Contact IAC staff at www.iac.wa.gov, or hunter education staff at huntered@dfw.wa.gov for more information.
